OWL TEA HOUSE

NOVELTIES OF THE SEASON.

JAMES, EX-OUTLAW

OLD, MILD-MANNERED
MISSOURI GENTLEMAN.

A Slim Man With Elongated Features and a Southern Accent and Drawl—Entertains Undying Hatred for Bob Ford Crowd, and Makes No Pretense of Forgiveness—His Home Is on a Clay County, Missouri, Farm.

Frank James, for years an outlaw with a heavy price on his head, and vainly hunted by some of the cleverest detectives and secret service men in the United States, was in Pendleton last night with a theatrical organization. He isn't hard to locate nowadays. He was seated behind the scenes at the Fraser theater last night when a reporter for the East Oregonian found him.

The old man with true Southern hospitality arose and offered his visitor the only seat available. He talks with the drawl of the native Missourian, and is pleasing to talk to. He is a little above the average in height and is slim built. His nose is long and his ears are large. His hands and his feet are long and slender, and the latter were incased in narrow, shiny boots with the tops hidden beneath the striped trousers. The iron-gray hair, when the large black slouch hat isn't covering it, appears thin on top. His mustache is shaggy and almost white.

The eyes of Frank James could not be overlooked. They are of a peculiar shade. They may be dark blue, and they may be brown. They are small, but not close together. And how they flash the signal of danger from the fire within!

"Bob Ford," (the interviewer casually and cautiously mentioned the name of the slayer of Jesse James.) Then there was a play of emotions in the face of the grizzled gun man that made him wish he hadn't said anything. Hate, contempt, anger, were depicted in those shining beads. "I am only half a man now," said James, in a low voice, "for 'I'm 62 years of age; but the man doesn't live on this earth whom I wouldn't face. Bob Ford and his cowardly associates knew this of Jesse when they waited their chance to murder him. But they have all come to their reward. Of the four concerned in that dastardly deed, Charley Ford and two others met death at their own hands, while Bob was shot down."

Mr. James makes his home on a little farm in Clay county, Missouri, near the scene of his birth. This is the first time he has ever been west of the Rocky mountains.

NO APPARENT REASON.

"The Fatal Scar" Leaves a Trail of Mysterious Auditors.

The only reason apparent why Frank James appears with "The Fatal Scar" company is to protect the cast when the audience clamors for its blood. There is no mistaking

"The Fatal Scar" for anything but a melo drama. There is the heavy villain, the two scoundrels who do his bidding, the wicked female and the saintly heroine and the rest, including Frank James. Mr. James and his huge "eight shooter" Colts automatic figured in the play possibly three or four seconds.

"O, who will rescue me from this awful place," sobs the heroine, and her captors chortle in fiendish glee. Now who else but Frank James could save her? And in he walks. One "eight shooter" precedes Frank and is under the villain's nose and its owner says:

"I will! Stand back!" and the audience goes wild.

When the sheriff comes in the next act to take away the bad ones, Frank James sits with him and he makes a little talk to the audience. His one desire in life, he says, aside from making a livelihood to his wife and son, is to clear his name from the stain that rests upon it. "I have been vindicated by the state and federal courts," he remarks, "and I would not be as black as some have painted me."

DOING BIG BUSINESS.

Yesterday Was a Record Breaker at the Postoffice.

Postmaster Livermore says that yesterday was a record breaker at the money order and registry windows, 54 pieces of mail being registered. Most of these were sent to friends in the East, or Central states. The number of packages being sent by ordinary mail also exceeds the record of previous years.

There could be no better indication of the general prosperity of the people than the business done at the postoffice. It is a good barometer of the looseness or tightness of the purse strings of the people. The record-breaking business being done by the postoffice this year certainly indicates not only that the people have money, but it also shows they are spending it freely.

An Able Speaker.

Evangelist Neal, who is holding a series of meetings at the Baptist church, is one of the most eloquent evangelists who has visited Pendleton. He is not only a pleasing and forceful speaker, but he is exceptionally well versed in the Bible. Tonight he will administer the ordinance of baptism. The meetings will last through the week. A cordial invitation is extended to the general public to attend these meetings.

Funeral of Miss Krasig.

The funeral of Miss Freda Krasig was held this morning at 9 o'clock, from St. Mary's Catholic church. Interment was at Olney. Rev. Father Trevill officiated. The funeral was largely attended by friends and relatives.

THE LAW'S HEAVY HAND
DROPS DOWN ON KELLEY.

Surprise Party for the Popular Railroader—Marshal Carney Takes Him in Custody, But the Only Penalty Accruing Was the Shock of the Arrest—Defendant Was Discharged by Judge Fitz Gerald.

There is a city ordinance, passed by the council and properly approved by the mayor, that expressly prohibits the distribution of handbills, or other advertising matter along the streets, unless one is a regularly licensed bill poster. But Brakeman Kelley didn't know this, and there is doubt if he would have acted differently than he did yesterday afternoon. If he had, Kelley's business is running trains and not "toting" dodgers.

Yesterday afternoon a bill distributor came down the street with a handful of dodgers, and evidently bent on finishing his job, he handed Kelley not one, but a huge roll. Kelley laughed and snatched down the street with the bills.

"Take one," he remarked, handing one of the papers to a friend, "and don't fail to come in and see our stock."

"It pays to advertise," he ejaculated, giving a second bill to another acquaintance. Kelley dampened his thumb with his tongue for the purpose of disengaging a third dodger from his bundle, when a heavy hand was laid on his shoulder.

It was Marshal Carney. "Come with me, young man," said the chief. "I have been looking for you for some time."

"What a-a-a-?" stammered Kelley.

"What have I done?"

"What have you done?" exclaimed the officer. "Why, you are doing it now—peddling bills without a license, and in spite of Kelley's protestations, he marched the unwilling prisoner before the city recorder."

The court smiled when it heard Kelley's explanation, and discharged the prisoner.

AN ENJOYABLE ENTERTAINMENT.

University of Oregon Glee and Mandolin Club Gave Splendid Entertainment to Appreciative Audience.

A large and appreciative audience greeted the University of Oregon Glee and Mandolin Club at the Christian church last night. There is some excellent talent among the boys and their work was of a high order. At times the audience was convulsed with laughter over some of the clever stunts done.

The program opened with a toast to Oregon by the Glee and Mandolin club.

One of the most enjoyable features of the evening was the song and monologue by Prof. G. W. Eyre, who is a graduate of the University of Oregon. His stunt consisted in coming out dressed as a Chinaman and telling a story in Chinese dialect. He had to respond to two encores. Mr. Rountree's monologue, "On a Street Car," was very cleverly done. Mr. Abbott and the glee club sang "Floating Idly," which was so thoroughly enjoyed that they were compelled to respond to an encore. "Alamo Love" was the next selection rendered by the mandolin club, the chorus being whistled.

Mr. Rountree, assisted by the glee club, told of the sorrows of Peter Gray to the great amusement of the audience. During his wonderful recital he used up a large supply of handkerchiefs to assuage his grief.

The program as a whole was very creditable. After the entertainment a reception was tendered to the Glee and Mandolin club by the high school students.
